The London School of Economics Alumni Economics Network: 2011 International Investment and Trade Forum on the Oil and Gas Sectors in Bangladesh and India brings the industry’s most senior management, leaders and policy makers together; to interact with senior executives from the European energy sector to discuss ideas and issues of mutual interest and establish useful business links.

The forum, the first of its kind, in London, is being organized by the London School of Economics and Political Science (LSE) Alumni Economics Network. It provides a powerful network to the LSE investment banking group, global oil economists and consultants. Dr Mamdouh G. Salameh, International Oil Economist, World Bank Consultant and Technical Expert at the United Nations Industrial Development Organisation (UNIDO) is one among many esteemed speakers and will be presenting a paper titled, ‘An Impending Oil Crunch by 2015.’

Oil industry leaders will explore the dynamic landscape of the Bangladesh oil and gas sector; initiatives for technology transfer and foreign investment in developing countries towards future growth and sustainability in this sector.

Representatives from the United Kingdom Trade Departments (UKTI) are seeking Bangladeshi SME entrepreneurs for direct investments in the country that will facilitate British trade and expand local Bangladeshi businesses.

Delegates from SMEs will have an opportunity to meet with investment bankers and private equity fund managers from the UK.

An increasing number of European integrated logistics service providers are actively looking to engage with local partners in Bangladesh as a channel through which they may expand their presence in emerging markets.

This event therefore provides an excellent meeting point to further market intelligence and commercially viable business links.

The forum will also address the wider influence of economic development as a means of reducing the burden of poverty through employment and investment. Speakers on the ethics, transparency and societal dynamics of the energy sector will include experts from the Department for International Development (DFID). They will also provide information on support available for enterprise and industries in developing countries.

For further details and to register at this forum visit www.oilandgasconferencelondon.com

If you would like to speak at the event or attend as a delegate please write to us at info@oilandgasconferencelondon.com